- Sidell, David (interviewee), Ernest (interviewer) Stiefel, and Doris (interviewer) Stiefel. Collection. Jewish Archives, University of Washington. Seattle, WA. Contents: Sidell discusses two of the youth activities he was involved in during the 1930s. At age 12 (CA 1934) he joined Boy Scout Troop 46, the only Jewish troop in Seattle. B'nai B'rith sponsored the troop, Harry Ash and Sol Levy were on the advisory committee, and Max Gurvich served as scoutmaster. Sidell describes some of the troop activities and names fellow members. At age 15 (CA 1937), he joined Aleph Zadik Aleph, a nationwide, service-oriented Jewish youth group also sponsored by B'nai B'rith. Sidell describes many of the social, athletic, and competitive activities hosted by the Seattle

chapter (#73) of AZA. He comments on the important role of AZA in his life and the lives of many of his friends and contemporaries. Sidell also mentions a social divide in the Seattle Jewish community that kept the groups living north and south of Cherry Street separate from each other. Sneesby, Jack T. Collection. Wisconsin Historical Society Archives. Madison, WI. Contents: A two-part memoir by Sneesby, a life-long resident of Wisconsin, concerning his youth in various cities and his World War II POW experiences. The first part concerns his military experiences as a member of the 338th Infantry Regiment, Co. I. Expanding on actual journal entries made at the time, Sneesby relates the story of his capture on November 1, 1944 in France [?] and his subsequent seven months of captivity at Stalag IIIB at Furstenburg and at Stalag IIIA at Luckenwalde. He details the daily routine of camp life, including descriptions of the prisoners' Christmas "celebration" in 1944, daily news updates of Allied advances, and the elaborate barter economy that existed within the camps. Also noteworthy are brief descriptions of routine infantry patrols before his capture and of the devastated appearance of Magdeburg near the end of the war. The second part of the memoir is a more complete autobiography in which he recounts growing up in Lake Geneva, New London, Amery, and Berlin, Wis.--all cities where his father worked as a clergyman. He describes fun with friends, family relationships, Scouting (a life-long activity), jobs he held as a youth, attendance at Ripon College both before and after the war, his military training and service, graduate studies, marriage, and his establishment of a dental practice in Menomonie, Wis.
